Guide to North Boulder Art District
Our mission is to enrich and advance the arts in Boulder through educational activities and engagement that promote the role of artists and creatives in our Community.
THE NOBO ART DISTRICT has always been, and always will be, built by the community it serves. We are fueled by our amazing group of member artists, as well as our wonderful business partners.

NoBo is home to an incredibly rich group of artists, working in many diverse fields. We as a board work simply to elevate these artists and the district they call home. By providing exhibition spaces, events, and a fabric of community, we strive to empower artists, giving them more tools with which to achieve success.

We encourage you to reach out to any artists in this book whose works sparks your interest. By interacting directly with artists, you can begin a conversation and personal relationship with the amazing creators in this community. When we work together on a local level we can enrich all our lives, and help create more art!!!

The NoBo Art District is an inclusive, grassroots, community-focused organization dedicated to promoting artists and creative businesses located along Broadway and the adjoining neighborhoods in north Boulder, Colorado. The NoBo area is characterized by upscale, mixed-use new urbanism, high-end restaurants and shops, and a mix of funky, artist-friendly warehouses. The NoBo Art District creates opportunities for artists to connect with each other and the broader community, promoting engagement through art, education, and events.

Membership is open to all—individuals, artists, creative businesses, and patrons of the arts. Our signature event, NoBo First Friday Artwalk, takes place in many locations around North Boulder and beyond. The NoBo Art District supports all forms of creative expressions and the collective effort to connect with and build community. New and returning members are welcome!

What we do:

• Create a dynamic and supportive environment for Boulder’s artists by sponsoring First Friday events, hosting open meetings, and connecting with artists outside our area.

• Fulfill the need for a sense of community and connection by hosting art projects like the PLACE Project, NoBo Little Libraries, and the Piano Project in our neighborhoods.

• Initiate a public arts program through place-making and public engagement, creating a vital street-scape enlivened by sculpture, lighting and other art installations.
UNTIL THE 1950S, what is now known as the North Boulder Art District (NoBo), located on the northern edge of the City of Boulder, was a rural and agricultural area. Characterized by orchards, farmland, cattle grazing, and chicken coops, this area was sustained by what is now known as Wonderland Lake. Other early post WWII cultural beginnings in NoBo include the Broadway commercial strip, now functioning as the heart of NoBo at the Yarmouth intersection.

Large pieces of NoBo lands were annexed by the City in the early 1950s and that process of slow incremental City growth continues today in spite of numerous attempts to redevelop portions of the area into larger more organized places to live, work, and play. In the 1960s this area, commonly known as Dog Patch, had a group of independent minded residents who unsuccessfully attempted to start their own town, separate from the City of Boulder and free from city regulations.

Appleridge Park was approved in 1968 as the city’s first Planned Urban Development (PUD). Wonderland Hill followed soon after, as a series of PUD plans were approved and built starting in 1973 and continuing through the ’80s. In the 1990s Dakota Ridge and the Holiday Neighborhoods were developed, establishing contemporary neighborhoods adjacent to the expansive city-owned open spaces west of NoBo, and including new urban services and main street style mixed uses, primarily on the eastern side of Broadway in the original strip commercial corridor from the 1950s.
Since much of the west side of Broadway was never annexed by the City, artists moved into the area because of lower rents and the availability of larger warehouse type spaces suitable for studios and informal galleries. In the last decade, human service and large storage facilities have been developed that take advantage of the lower real estate costs in the County enclaves.

Today in NoBo, the Broadway corridor has a bifurcated appearance. The newer low scale 1990s mixed uses are located on the eastern side of Broadway with contemporary civic infrastructure, contrasting with the western side characterized by older industrial uses, warehouses, incomplete sidewalk connections, large parking lots, and sporadic new development.

The 2015 City of Boulder Community Cultural Plan identified NoBo as a key opportunity area for supporting the creative economy and the cultural tourism of Boulder. In 2017, the Boulder City Council unanimously adopted a declaration and resolution recognizing the area as the NoBo Art District.

formalizing its boundaries and allowing the City and the Art District to align their goals, galvanize support for artists in NoBo and across Boulder, creating opportunities for future collaboration.

The future of the area is linked to the future of the NoBo Art District organization. Our goal is to empower the neighborhood to thoughtfully shape its own future. The aim is for NoBo to proactively plan for, and respond to, the needs of artists, creatives, and small businesses, and establish a sustainable revenue stream and organizational management structure that will ensure the continued vitality and prosperity of the area. The NoBo of tomorrow is a thriving creative district that preserves the best of today while providing for the needs of future generations.

UPSLOPE BREWING COMPANY
Boulder, Colorado may not be huge, but its thirst for well-crafted beer is so giant it couldn’t be quenched with one Upslope tap room. So we gave it two. Our main production brewery at Flatiron Park, puts the “Park” in “Office Park.” And our original brewery, on Lee Hill in North Boulder, is where most of the experimenting and beer-brewing high jinks happen. So stop into either. Whether you love craft beer, or just like well-crafted beards, you really can’t go wrong.

SPECIAL EVENTS
We welcome your next meeting, yoga retreat, or a relaxed environment to have a gathering in, but you will all walk out healthier!

From our founder, Pamela Martyna:
I got into Salt Halotherapy because of my acute asthma. I was taking all the western drugs and was seeing no serious improvement. In fact, the drugs were causing me to lose hair and affected my skin. I learned of this ancient healing practice and had nothing to lose by trying it. After about two weeks of regular treatments, I started to see improvements in my wheezing. At the end of 4 months of treatment I told my doctor to “put down that prescription pad”. I have found, when I salt on a regular basis, I can leave my meds behind. This is why I opened Salt of the Earth.
